Overview

This course introduces students to the history, theory and practice of international development. Students will examine the different meanings and objectives of international development, paying particular attention to poverty alleviation, inequality reduction, capability enhancement, the defense of human rights and sustainability. We will compare mainstream and critical approaches to development, and study the roles of different actors involved in the field. Through real-world cases, the course will also address the implications of development initiatives and projects for marginalized groups in the Global South – including small farmers, indigenous groups, and women – and the environment. This introductory course will prepare students to better participate in global development projects. Students will also be ready for more advanced courses on development.

Learning Outcomes

Students will be able to:

- 1. Demonstrate the ability to describe the social, political, and economic forces that influence social behavior
- 2. Demonstrate the ability to describe the social, political, and economic forces that influence the global system
- 3. Describe and assess the different goals pursued in international development
- 4. Understand and critically evaluate some of the prevalent theories in the field
- 5. Deploy those theories to analyze the many problems faced by the different actors involved in the project of development
- 6. Describe how key international financial institutions, states, firms, and civil society organizations are organized and how they frame development issues
- 7. Use different sources of data to develop cross-country comparisons along various indicators of development
- 8. Express their arguments clearly and effectively both in written reports and class discussions
- 9. Work in small groups in a way that demonstrates respect for their colleagues and efficiency in working collaboratively towards projects and goals

Required Text

Haslam, P., Jessica Shafer and Pierre Baudet (eds). Introduction to International Development: Approaches, actors, and issues. Canada: Oxford University Press, 2012. Requirements:

- Attendance and participation (25%): The course will require students to participate in different in-class activities, including discussions, small group projects and case analysis. In those activities, students will draw on the readings for the class. Therefore, attendance is required, and you must complete the assigned readings before class. Absences will count against your participation score.
- Quizzes (25%): Students will complete six pop quizzes throughout the course. These short quizzes will have two short answer questions related to the readings for the class. The lowest score will be dropped.
- Written assignments (40%): Students will turn in four four-page responses, one for each of the course modules. The questions to motivate the assignments will be provided one week before the due date. Due dates are marked in the calendar below.
- Final exam (10%)

ADAPTS

The instructor will work with ADAPTS so that all students have an equal opportunity for success. For information on ADAPTS, see http://www.adapts.gatech.edu/

Academic integrity and Honor Code

While students are encouraged to work together and collaborate with each other, you should clearly differentiate your work from that of others, including your peers and bibliographical sources. Complete and accurate representation of all direct quotations and paraphrased material is required. Plagiarizing will be addressed in accordance with the Georgia Tech Honor Code (http://honor.gatech.edu/plugins/content/index.php?id=9)
